USAID is helping farmers' organizations, like this group in Kano, Nigeria, to plant and harvest higher-yielding crops. These women have boosted their incomes by producing more cowpeas than in previous years. Photo credit: A. Fleuret, USAID.

A group of small-scale farmers in Mozambique who operate a fish farm use a net to collect tilapia fingerlings. These will be used to help other farmers start fish farming and thereby diversify their income sources. Photo credit: S. Poland, USAID.
